1 Pound Propane Cylinders – There's a New Refillable In Town!

The Problem: Four million disposable 1 pound (lb.) propane cylinders are sold each and every year in California alone. Consumers spend around $4.00+ per disposable cylinder but only use about $0.30 worth of propane gas inside. Getting rid of empty cylinders can be confusing. Some folks sneak them into their garbage bins, since they cannot go into regular recycling or call their local Hazardous Waste hauler. Many people leave them behind at the places where they used them, or accumulate a pile of cylinders in their garage. Some people buy adapters to refill them, which is extremely dangerous as they are not manufactured to be repressurized.

Parks and local governments pay around $2.00 - $3.50 per cylinder for specialized companies to manage the cylinders. That means not only did you spend money to buy a disposable item on the front end, but your tax dollars are being spent to dispose of them on the back end as well! There IS a better way, and Flame King and Manchester Tank offer a solution!

The Solution: Using refillables will save you money, hassle, and reduce pollution. If you're a camper, BBQ cook or tailgate party chef, choose the refillable option to save money, hassle, and do something good for the environment.

WVC&R offers "Rent-Me" boxes that are perfect to dispose of all those unwanted items that you've accumulated over the years. "Rent-me" boxes are available in 2 different sizes, 3 and 4 cubic yard. They are metal bins equipped with wheels and lids to keep your waste fully contained. These boxes are a great solution if you have space restrictions since they are smaller than a roll-off and are less expensive.

Cleaning doesn't have to be done during just one season either. Look out for your annual Clean-up notification in the mail! If you haven't decided whether or not you should keep those extra items, WVC&R will also collect items curbside annually. A notification of your scheduled date and acceptable items will be mailed one month prior to your clean up so keep an eye out!
